THE CLOSE AT HARLEM.

Undoubtedly the worst track of the year was that at Harlem yesterday, the horses throwing water from their heels at each stride.

The feature race of the day was the Chicago Stakes, a dash of one mile for three-year-olds and upward, with $2,000 added. The race was taken by McChesney in impressive fashion after a splendid ride in the last quarter by Buchanan. Of the seven scheduled to start, Vulcain and Harry New were absentees, but the adding of Muresca at the last moment, sent a field of six to the post. McChesney, probably on his higher class, was made the favorite. To a fair start, Muresca, as was reasonably expected, darted to the front, closely followed by Duelist and Rolling Boer, with the others strung out. Going down the backstretch, Muresca opened up a gap of two and one-half lengths on Duelist, which gradually lengthened the distance between him and Rolling Boer. Turning for home, however, McChesney, which had been badly outrun up to this point, began to move up fast. Muresca and Duelist turned for home necks apart, but the former was first to crack and fall away beaten. At the last eighth post Duelist still had a lead of four lengths on McChesney but the latter under a vigorous and determined ride by Buchanan steadily wore him down, winning at the end handily by one length from Scarlet Lily which beat the tiring Duelist a nose for second place. Scarlet Lily made up ground fast in the last quarter and just got up in time in the last stride to get second place. Duelist was a much distressed horse at the finish. Rolling Boer ceased to be a serious contender after a half mile had been run. The Lady was nowhere near up to a good race and might just as well have remained in her stall. Muresca ran well for six furlongs. The stake was worth $2,730 to the winner.

The steeplechase over the short course proved to be an easy thing for Henry Gibbs, which took kindly to the going and fenced without the slightest mistake. He laid along in third position, but at the fifth jump, when the leader, Crest, fell, moved up fast on even terms with Old Fox. The latter two ran close together until after taking the eighth jump, where Henry Gibbs easily went to the front and was never afterward headed, winning, as his rider pleased, by three lengths from Old Fox, which beat Bristol six for second place. Bristol made up ground after taking the last jump and finished strongly. After Crest fell the race was strictly a three-horse affair.

In the day's opening race, a five furlongs scramble for two-year-olds, Goody Twoshoes, an outsider in the betting, proved to be much the best. First Florestan led and then Style, the latter appearing the winner at the last eighth post, but about here Goody Twoshoes moved up on her fast and passed into the lead, easily winning by one length from Florestan, which beat Zephone for second place. Florestan rallied in the last sixteenth and finished stoutly. Zephone came with a rush at the end after making up much ground in the last fourth. Style faded away when the pinch came. Albemarle appeared to have a chance in the last eighth, but faltered when called on.

Howendobler fairly ran away with the purse in the second race, a dash of five and a half furlongs for three-year-olds and upward. He ran Private Nolan into early submission and then came away without much effort, winning by seven lengths in a canter from Private Nolan, which beat Chanton four for second place. Sandflea ran a dull race, falling away easily beaten by the time the head of the stretch had been reached.

The fifth race, a five and a half furlongs dash for three-year-olds and upward, resulted in a surprise. Lady Contrary winning easily by a half length from Silver Fizz, which beat Merops three and a half for second place. Lady Contrary displayed much speed throughout and appeared to be winning easily when a furlong out, but had to be driven out to stall off Silver Fizz's determined bid in the last sixteenth. Pirate's Queen, badly outrun in the first half, made up ground fast in the last quarter and was wearing down Merops in the closing strides for third place. Haydon, the decided first choice in the betting, ran a bad race, falling away badly beaten by the time the head of the stretch had been reached. He was hopelessly beaten off at the end.

The last race run at Harlem this year, a dash of one and one-sixteenth miles, was taken by Scotch Plaid in a terrific last sixteenth drive with Banish. Scotch Plaid moved up fast when entering the last sixteenth, but was joined here by Banish, the two fighting it out hard to the wire. Scotch Plaid won by a nose, while Banish beat Chickadee five lengths for second place. Banish swerved slightly in the last thirty yards. Learoyd showed early speed, but he was scored into exhaustion by many false breakaways. Irving Mayor and Alaska, both prominent at the head of the stretch, tired fast when called on in the final furlong struggle.

PHOENIX HANDICAP WEIGHTS.

The Phoenix Handicap will be decided at Worth Thursday. It is a dash of one and one-sixteenth miles for three-year-olds, with $1,500 added, and from the character of the entries should be productive of a slashing race. The weights assigned by Secretary Jasper are as follows:

LOCAL TURF GOSSIP.

A rumor was current before the racing yesterday that McChesney had fallen and injured himself, while being taken off the car after being shipped from Hawthorne. The horse, while walking in the paddock before the stake race, showed an ugly gash about two inches long on one of his hind legs, evidently made by the heel of one of his plates in an attempt to arise from the ground after falling.

John F. Schorr shipped Joe Frey, Almarie and Esherin to St. Louis, where they will be raced until the close of the season. The two-year-old Maxette, belonging to M. Shannon, accompanied the Schorr horses.

Green B. Morris is expected to arrive in Chicago from New York Thursday with his strong stable of horses, which includes the Buffalo Derby winner, Sombrero, Homestead, Cunard, Old England, Artis, Janice and others.

H. Stover arrived yesterday from Toronto with W. H. Ketchiman's horses and will race the remainder of the season on the local tracks.

H. Gardner, the owner of Scotch Plaid, instructed his trainer, T. Licalzi, to protect the horse to $1,205 in case he won and was bid up. When Secretary Nathanson asked for bids on the horse after he had won Mr. Durnell, of Durnell & Herz, bid $800, an advance of $100 over the entered price, and as no other bids were made the horse was sold to Mr. Durnell. Mr. Licalzi latter informed Gardner that he had made an advance bid and thought that the bid of $800 was his. Gardner recently claimed Rolling Boer from Durnell & Herz.

Jockeys T. Dean and Otis will arrive today from St. Louis. Jockeys R. Steele and McInerney, who have been riding on the Canadian circuit the past summer, will be additional riding talent at Worth. Both are due to arrive from Toronto today.

Jockey L. Jackson who was in the employ of G. B. Morris, and who has been riding at St. Louis will arrive at Worth today and ride for H. Stover the remainder of the season.

From a time standpoint the Chicago Stakes was the slowest race run in Chicago in many years, the first half mile being covered in 56 seconds, the three-quarters in 1:27%, and the mile in 1:59%, the last half mile, 1:03%.

A NEW TURFMAN.

Concerning a possible accession to the list of wealthy turfmen of this country, the New York Evening Sun says:

"At a time when those two giants of the far northwest, Marcus Daly and Senator W. A. Clark, were all but throttling one another in a personal quarrel, with an enmity which made the world stand aghast, the latter declared he would vanquish his antagonist in politics and upon the turf. He did finally go to Washington from Montana in spite of Daly, and now he proposes to make good the latter stipulation of his promise. It can be set down for a fact today that Senator W.A. Clark will at once set about the organization of a strong string of high-class thoroughbreds and that his racing silks will be seen on metropolitan courses in 1903. Clark's conquest would be incomplete until he had achieved a turf renown the glories of which will eclipse the still shining star of Bitter Root Farm and the great Montana. Then only will Clark cry quits with Daly in the fight of a life, waged deep down in the copper mine shafts of Montana, upon the rolling ranch lands of Wyoming, in Wall street, upon Fifth avenue, and in congressional halls."

"A prominent sales commissioner vouchsafed the information at Gravesend that Senator Clark, through the medium of his son, Charles C. Clark, recently elected president of the newly organized Northwestern and Montana Jockey Club, had already availed himself of the finest stock farm property in the upper Butte country, which is fast being converted into a stud surpassing in appointment and magnificence the far-famed Bitter Root Farm in Marcus Daly's halcyon days. Charles C. Clark will, it is thought, come east in 1903 to have an eye to his father's string, which will of necessity be small and select in its first year. The mixed lot purchased at the Doncaster sales is now on the high seas and will be wintered in Kentucky."

"Six of the lot are two-year-olds and are intended for active racing campaign next year, while the others were purchased for breeding purposes. It is said Senator Clark's agents will be buyers at the forthcoming sale of the English thoroughbred stock now quartered at the Empire City track. The registration of colors and the engagement of a trainer are matters which will be left over until next spring. Senator Clark's great mansion on Fifth avenue is just now nearing completion, and his world famous art treasures are awaiting their places. He took up this hobby of paintings and statuary several years ago. He has pursued it with the same feverish energy that has quickened his chase after wealth, until today, on the eve of the opening of his magnificent home, he possesses one of the most notable collections in the world. Although kept close to the harsh life of the early days of the far west, he believes himself to be a competent judge between the real and the false in art. Clark set about to improve his mind and soften his nature just as soon as he gained a competency. He perused learned books, absorbed art and belles lettres. Then, in later years, he built the Fifth avenue treasure house. Now he turns to the thoroughbred with still a memory of his antagonist before him. Thousands upon thousands, who in past years stood in awe of the magnificent courage and indomitable resolve of the 'Copper Kings,' will follow the fortunes of Clark upon the turf with no little interest."

WINNERS AT HARLEM.

During the course of the 1902 racing season of the Harlem Jockey Club, the imposing sum of $187,775 was distributed among the owners who raced their horses over its attractive and finely appointed track. This is an average of a fraction over $4,366 per day, a good showing indeed. Edward Corrigan stands well in front of the long list of winning owners, an anomaly in view of past local racing politics, but a pleasing incident. Owners credited with winning $1,000 or more rank as follows:

OVERRACING TWO-YEAR-OLDS.

Captain Thomas B. Merry is much opposed to the American custom of racing two-year-olds as early as the month of January and in a recent letter says:

"The two-year-olds on the Pacific Coast certainly do get a great deal of hard usage, as they begin racing them early in January when most of them are yearlings. The worst case of this kind that I know of is that of Arabo, a greatly overgrown youngster by Nomad-Charm, by Cheviot, who was an April foal and yet was started no less than fourteen times before the twelfth day of that month in this year. He won twice, was four times second and once third. In the Gebhard Handicap, won by Gold Van, he gave five pounds to the winner and was beaten a short head, with High Chancellor, Honiton, Sylvia Talbot, Orfeo and Georgie West behind him. Arabo's starting price was 25 to 1, the Chinn pair being the favorites. High Chancellor had won four times, once second and three times third; Honiton had won twice and been three times second; Sylvia Talbot had won four times, was three times second and twice third; Orfeo had won twice and been once second, and Georgie West had won three times and been once third. This does not seem so bad till you consider that Arabo was sixteen and one-half hands high before he went into training in December. In England, so large and growthy a colt would not be started before the St. Leger meeting at Doncaster; and in Australia he would not be called on to face the flag till he was three years old, at least. I certainly hope that there will be some steps taken to stop this greedy and cruel racing of yearlings (for that is all they are) before the 15th of May; and I would like it all the better if June was the earliest month in the year when they could be raced. The question that naturally suggests itself is, where is this thing going to end? And will there not come a day when purses are offered for yearlings?"

"I am aware that many yearlings are taken up and tried at a quarter of a mile, in the east, before entering on the second year following the date of their foaling. Few of the great performers of Australia were trained at two. Metos, whom I always have believed to be the Lanercost of the South Continent, was not trained until three, nor was that great little black horse Commotion, the only horse that ever won two races of three miles below 5:27. Meerloolas, who won the Hawkesbury Autumn

OVERRACING TWO-YEAR-OLDS.

Handicap and Sydney Cup in 1898, was never trained till the fall he was four; and it is doubtful, with all the great horses that New South Wales has produced up to date, if she ever produced a more resolute finisher. Merman, the great Australian horse that was sent to England where he won the Cesarewitch at five years old and the Ascot Cup at six, in addition to walking over for the Goodwood Cup, was broken but not started till he was three. Go to Mr. Whitney's La Belle farm and look at Yankee, Endurance by Right, and the other illustrious cripples in that barn—all sacrificed to the American fashion of racing two-year-olds till they literally fall to pieces."

QUEEN MARY AND GLENCOE.

In 1834 Glencoe won the Two Thousand, Plenipotentiary the Derby and Touchstone the St. Leger. All were race horses of extraordinary merit. In an article concerning their performances an eastern writer says:

"Out of this year of turf prodigies, of cross purposes and heart-burnings, all falsely foreboding the downfall or even the decline of the turf, were evolved events of the highest importance to the turf in America, and it seemed as though they had to happen just as they did for us to get any good out of them. The existence and influence of a score or more of the brightest equine lights that have shone on this continent were doubtless conditioned on Glencoe's defeat by Plenipotentiary before the Derby and in that race. And he ran third in the Blue Ribbon event. He had quality enough to win it as it was. On this slight link was conditioned the facts of a Hindoo, a Hanover, a Hamburg, and that vast influence of the female descendants of the son of Sultan on the American thoroughbred. The English retained what they thought the best two of the trio, selling us the cast-off, but a real brilliant if not the brightest of the cluster. Plenipotentiary was not a striking success at the stud, but it should not be forgotten that bred to Myrrha, daughter of Whalebone, he got an unnamed filly which, bred to Gladiator became the dam of Queen Mary, one of the greatest matrons of the turf. Touchstone came soon into greatness as a sire, getting three Derby winners and founding the prepotent Hermit-Newminster line long fashionable, though now a bit passe in England, the representative of which in this country is the one-hundred-thousand dollar St. Blaise, winner of the Derby of 1883.

"Some families of horses, like some of the human family, seem predestined to misfortune and calamity, from which some of them emerge to greatness after the fullness of time. Queen Mary has been referred to, and her miseries rival those of her namesake, the Stuart queen, over whose fate sentimental tears of three centuries have been shed. Ramsey of Barnton bred Queen Mary the filly, but the homely creature possessed no attraction for him, and he gave her to his friend l'Anson, who was a great breeder and should have had some sense. But Queen Mary was too cheap, and neither he nor his trainer valued her, and they got rid of her for a song, a Scotch farmer becoming her master. She had left a filly behind her, however, before the transfer, Haricot, and in time the latter disclosed something of the gift of galloping. Then l'Anson went hunting after Queen Mary. He found her on a bleak hillside, in dead of winter, half starved and frozen, too weak to raise a welcoming whinny for her deliverer, shivering at her side a yearling filly, Braxy by Moss Trooper, and a starving runt of a colt, Balronney by Annandale and Queen Mary herself in foal to a cold-blooded horse! Was ever four-footed merit in such distress as this? Twenty pounds got the undeserving l'Anson the whole lot, and he had a patience-taxing task to get this phantom drove to his home. That trifling reinvestment meant to the lucky l'Anson Blink Bonnie, Derby and Oaks; Blair Athol, Derby and St. Leger; Caller On, St. Leger, and any quantity of other good things, including for us over here, Bonnie Scotland, Luke Blackburn, George Kinney and four-footed wealth it would take hours to schedule.

"Bonnie Scotland was another of those unfortunate predestinate. In England he showed quality enough to live with any of them, but something was always certain to happen to him when about ready for a race. Shipped over here, he languished among the sloughs of Illinois, as did the sire of the great Miss Woodford, Billet, until the fullness of time and other things rescued them and brought them to the blue grass paradise, where distinguished mates awaited them.

"Glencoe had the narrowest of escapes. Although, like Diomed with Young Giantess, he had, before his deportation, presented his countrymen with a priceless gift in Pocahontas—she the dam of three such giants as Stockwell, Rataplan and King Tom, yet she came too late to save his reputation, and they cast him out in 1836, before Pocahontas was foaled. They had passed upon him and found him wanting, and there was no appeal. Now, could he have only landed right up to his knees in the blue grass of Kentucky, what great things might not have happened right away? But that was not in the womb of fate.

"To Mr. James Jackson of Northern Alabama, was the honor of the first American ownership of Glencoe. He had imported the Derby winner of 1832, St. Giles, but the horse had died soon after arrival, and he replaced him with Glencoe, the two being closely related through Tramp, the sire of St. Giles and of Glencoe's dam. How they ever expected to raise race horses in that blue grassless region of cotton stalks the Lord only knows, but they succeeded in originating a few, and Huntsville, where Mr. Jackson lived, was something of a racing center. It was long odds that Glencoe would not here achieve the distinction that came to him later, thoroughbred mares of any quality being as scarce in Alabama as the conventional dodo. Hither came the English exile, worn by a long voyage in a sailing vessel, and leg weary from having 'hiked' through three states, this being before the luxuries of horse palace cars and first class Atlantic steamer passages. Glencoe's opportunity came in the death of Mr. Jackson himself, and the speculation that sent the great nag up the Mississippi to the blue grass region of Kentucky, where he became the property, first of Mr. John Harper and later of Mr. A. Keene Richards, in whose possession he died in 1861. His influence on American thoroughbred blood, chiefly through his daughters, is incalculable, and it would require a column to name the great mares, racers and matrons which he got. They were out of all proportion to the number of his sons, but there was scarcely an exception as to their high quality. The male line also showed the prepotency of the son of Sultan. Bred to Alaric's dam, she by Tranby, the result was the good race horse Vandal, and the union of the latter with Hymenia, by Yorkshire, produced Virgil, which, though so little esteemed as to have been put over the jumps and degraded to wagon, bred to Florence by Lexington, gave to the world the incomparable Hindoo, whence Hanover and Hamburg, and others capable of sustaining the line of Glencoe."

JOCKEYS ENGAGED.

"The eastern turf world will be greatly surprised to learn that two of the most prominent jockeys now riding in America will probably join the colony of Yankee riders abroad next season," says Morning Telegraph of Thursday.

"One of them, Nash Turner, has already signed a contract to ride for the stable of W. K. Vanderbilt in France next year.

"The other, Lucien Lyne, will in all probability contract to ride in England for J. R. Keene for $20,000 a year and all the princely perquisites that go with such an engagement.

"When Mr. Keene decided to strengthen materially his already formidable English stable two serious obstacles stood in his way. The first was the lack of a satisfactory trainer. This was overcome when the contract with trainer Matt Allen was secured. The second remained, but no sooner was Allen in harness than he took up the question with his new employer. The result was that negotiations were opened with young Lyne.

"After an interview with the lad Mr. Keene decided that $15,000 a year would be about the right figure. When Lyne was informed of the decision he promptly declined the offer, saying that J. B. Haggin had offered him that amount to ride his horses on American tracks next season.

"Lyne was finally asked for terms, and he named $20,000, with the proviso that he would have to get the parental consent. He agreed not to do business with any one until his offer had been considered by Mr. Keene, and there is not much doubt but what his terms will be accepted. To-day will likely decide, and it can be stated as reasonably certain that Lyne will wear the Keene colors on the English turf in 1903.

Jockey Lucien Lyne two years ago this Spring was virtually on a par with the apprentice class as to ability, riding only occasionally, and then mostly horses of moderate caliber. One day, on Approval, at Sheepshead Bay, Lyne was thrown into the fence and broke his leg. This laid him up for the remainder of that season.

"Last year he began his riding career in the west fairly well and along in the fall he won so many races and improved so much that on the day when he rode four winners at Latonia he was engaged by A. H. & D. H. Morris to ride their horses at New Orleans last winter.

"At New Orleans Lyne rode many other horses besides those in the Morris stable, and at the close of New Orleans went up the western circuit. Along in the early summer John A. Drake and Enoch Wishard engaged him, and since then his progress has been rapid.

"Young Lyne is the son of Sanford C. Lyne, of Kentucky, a breeder in a small way, and the lad has been raised as a Kentucky gentleman's son, and given a fair education. His parents, particularly his mother, were opposed to his taking up the profession of a jockey from the danger of such a life, but parental opposition has yielded before the lad's remarkable success.

"In the last few months young Lyne has ridden the winners of the American Derby, Futurity and many other great races. He almost won the whole program (four races) at Gravesend last week, and stands today as the equal in favor of any jockey in America. Quiet and self-contained, with none of the 'rough' about him, either in races or on the ground, young Lyne is universally esteemed and respected. Bar accident, he has a great future ahead of him.

"Turner signed the contract with W. K. Vanderbilt yesterday morning in the office of the millionaire owner, and through its terms will have one of the best engagements of any American boy abroad.

"The contract will be in effect from February 1 to December 1, 1903, and provides that Turner shall receive a salary of $10,000 yearly, together with all expenses, including a home.

"He will be required to report in Paris on the first of February, in order to assist in training the horses for the opening of the season, April 1.

"The news that Turner has been engaged under such advantageous circumstances will be received with pleasure by his many friends. He is one of the best riders in this country and a thorough horseman. He is capable of putting up a finish second to none.

"For the past two years Turner has been receiving a liberal salary from W. C. Whitney. This season he has had little opportunity to display his ability in the saddle, and at times it was difficult to keep in condition owing to the lack stable mounts. He showed good form in the saddle during the Sheepshead Bay meeting.

"Negotiations to secure the services of Turner for the Vanderbilt stable have been pending for some time, but the matter was not closed until the arrival of Mr. Vanderbilt.

"A feature of the contract which is favorable to Turner is that he will not be required to do less than 120 pounds. He is under engagement for this country as well as France, but most of his riding is likely to be done abroad.

"Mr. Vanderbilt will have a strong stable in charge of Eddie Hughes. In the early part of this season a number of his horses went wrong, and jockey Buchanan, who was under engagement to him, was sent home. During the past few months the colors of the well known owner have frequently been seen in front, as the two-year-olds in his string have been displaying good form.

"With a stronger stable and a jockey like Turner to ride, Mr. Vanderbilt will doubtless prove to be an important factor on the French turf next season.

Turner intended to ride in California during the coming season and hoped to go out there in November. He is now undecided about the trip, owing to the necessity of going to France so early. If the weights out there are favorable, he may ride on the coast for two months. His engagement with Mr. Whitney ends at the close of the present season.

"In some quarters there is an idea that Tommy Burns may be selected to ride for W. C. Whitney in England next season. The jockey stated yesterday that he is only under engagement to ride in this country, he having cut out the clause providing that he should go abroad if necessary.

"Burns said he would not care to go to England to ride unless he received a higher salary than his present contract provides for.

"Without having the services of Turner, and as Burns is to ride in this country, there will be considerable speculation as to who Mr. Whitney will secure to ride for his English stable, especially as indications point to him taking an active interest in turf affairs across the Atlantic.

"Jockey Shaw stated yesterday that he will go to California at the close of the present season. He has no engagement to ride there, but doubtless there will be a liberal demand for his services. This will be the first time Shaw has visited California.

"Green Morris is anxious to secure a jockey to ride for him in California, but up to date he has not succeeded in engaging one. He has spoken to O'Connor and Shaw, but as they are under engagement to Mr. Featherstone and 'Pittsburg Phil,' respectively, for next season, he would be obliged to relinquish call on their services in the spring when he comes east. Mr. Morris said yesterday that he could sign a jockey at once but for his desire to have one who would remain with him for the eastern campaign next year.

"W. O'B. Macdonough, the California millionaire, is also trying to secure a lightweight jockey to ride for him in the west. He expected that he would be able to engage Redfern, but was disappointed.

"He also made an effort to get J. Martin, but T. Welch did not like the idea of allowing him to ride in the winter. Mr. Macdonough has a strong stable for next season, and a jockey who signs with him will have a good opportunity."

Albula outclassed his field and set all his own pace, but had to be hustled along in the last eighth to stall off Hinsdale. The latter closed a big gap, but swerved in the last sixteenth when Irvan drew his whip. Alfred Vargrave dropped out of it in the run down the backstretch and made up a lot of ground while rounding the far turn, but tired at the finish. This was not his race. Georgia Gardner was used up in chasing Albula and quit badly in the last quarter.
